Two years after #MeToo, what next? Equality bodies combatting sexual harassment @ work

23 - 24 October 2019

LOCATION:

23/10/2019 : La Tricoterie, Rue Théodore Verhaegen 158, 1060 Brussels

24/10/2019 : Bedford Hotel & Congress Centre, Rue du Midi 135, Brussels, Belgium

BACKGROUND INFORMATION AND CONTEXT

Two years after the international outburst of the #MeToo movement, which unveiled countless stories and instances of sexual harassment in the workplace and beyond, Equinet and the UN Human Rights Regional Office for Europe are organizing a roundtable and conference on the role and potential of equality bodies designing and implementing policies to eradicate sexual harassment.

While political discussions and general awareness-raising on sexual harassment in the workplace have consistently increased in the past two years, progress needs to be made in preventing and systematically tackling the issue. As a new European strategic document for gender equality is under preparation in the post-#MeToo era, preventing and responding to sexual harassment must be a priority for the new European Commission.

Because they are mandated by EU law to assist victims of sexual harassment in the workplace and to promote gender equality, national equality bodies are highly relevant actors to ensure effective implementation of anti-harassment laws and policies. They do so through direct assistance to victims, but also through collecting data on sexual harassment, conducting research and surveys to help identify gaps, setting-up codes of conduct in the private and public sector, building partnerships with civil society and social partners, issuing recommendations to policy-makers, training and campaigning.

Equality bodies have been further recognized as central national institutions across the EU for assisting victims of discrimination and harassment, through the adoption of an EC Recommendation on standards for equality bodies. Therefore, equality bodies should be considered as essential partners and stakeholders when leading the work to tackle sexual harassment in Europe.

This conference will aim at highlighting the centrality and relevance of equality bodies for effectively designing and implementing anti-harassment laws and policies. Local, national and European policy-makers are invited to participate in this event, to unpack the considerable potential held by equality bodies as well as the many challenges they face when tackling sexual harassment in the workplace.

The conference will be preceded by a reception and roundtable held the day before, on 23rd October, where high level representatives from civil society and international organisations will discuss the post-MeToo era in Europe.

PARTICIPANTS

While this awareness-raising conference is mainly addressed to European, national and local policy-makers, it is also open to the wider public (civil society, social partners, academics, etc.) and to equality bodies from all over Europe.
