CONCEPT NOTE

Background

Equinet and Equality Bodies

Equinet is the only European Network of Equality Bodies that facilitates the representation, promotion and protection of its members' interests at European level. Currently, Equinet has 48 members in 38 countries including all the EU countries as well as some non-EU members. The main objective of this network is to strengthen the position and reputation of Equality Bodies to achieve equality for all and to create knowledge that tackles discrimination, particularly on the grounds of age, racial or ethnic origin, gender, sexual orientation, religion or belief, disability and the intersection of these social backgrounds. National Equality Bodies are independent public institutions promoting equality and combating discrimination in their countries. Every Member State, and several other countries around Europe, have an obligation under existing EU Equal Treatment Directives to designate an Equality Body or Bodies to promote equality and combat discrimination. However, the current provisions on Equality Bodies leave a large discretion to the Member States as to the mandate, powers, independence, and resources of these bodies. Differences between the Member States in the structure and functioning of Equality Bodies result in unequal protection against discrimination across the EU and an inadequate implementation of the EU's equal treatment legislation. In 2018, the Commission published a Recommendation on standards for Equality Bodies. While it isn't a legally binding document, it was a strong signal for Member States to strengthen their Equality Bodies. It came shortly after a revised recommendation from the Council of Europe's European Commission against Racism and Intolerance, setting out clear and comprehensive standards for Equality Bodies.

Legislative proposals on standards for Equality Bodies

In 2021, the Commission published a report on the application of the Racial Equality Directive and the Employment Equality Directive. The report looked into the implementation of the Commission's 2018 Recommendation and was accompanied by a more detailed Staff Working Document on Equality Bodies. The report highlighted that Equality Bodies have emerged as necessary and valuable institutions for change at the level of individuals, institutions and society at large. However, most of the issues that the Recommendation aimed to address remained unresolved, hindering some Equality Bodies in carrying out their role in an effective way. This showed that the Recommendation was not sufficient and in December 2022, led to the Commission proposing legislation to strengthen the role of Equality Bodies. As the Commission put it, 'Equality bodies are essential in assisting victims of discrimination and making sure that EU law on non-discrimination is implemented on the ground. This new legislation will ensure that equality bodies can achieve their full potential. It will better protect victims of discrimination and contribute to the prevention of discrimination.’ Such legally binding standards have the potential to make Equality Bodies more independent, effective, respected and accessible. These standards will allow them to play their role as the cornerstones of national equality infrastructures even more effectively, in close cooperation with other important actors, such as NHRIs, Ombud institutions, civil society organisations, trade unions and other public bodies such as education and labor inspectorates.

The project

Against this backdrop, the European Network of Equality Bodies (EQUINET) is implementing a project in 2023-24, funded by the German Federal Anti-Discrimination Agency (FADA). This project aims to contribute to reaching an effective legislation on Standards for Equality Bodies in all EU countries, thanks to a strong involvement of Equality Bodies and the recognition among all stakeholders of the importance of common Standards for efficient Equality Bodies.

The project aims to increase Equinet Members’ capacity to accompany and advise their national authorities on the Directives and their transposition and implementation at national level while raising the awareness among national and European authorities and stakeholders about the importance of safeguarding the full potential of these Directives both during the legislative review process and at national implementation phase.

Participation and objectives of the conference and workshop

The conference and workshop are organised in the frame of the EQUINET-FADA project. The objective of this joint event is two-fold. First, it aims at increasing awareness and understanding amongst decision makers about Equality Bodies. Second, it aims at increasing the capacity amongst Equinet Members to advocate for an optimal national transposition and implementation of the Standards directives.

Specifically, the objectives of the conference on Day 1 are to:

- Raise awareness and improve understanding of the new Directives on Standards for Equality Bodies and of Equality Bodies themselves and to reflect and exchange on how the implementation phase at national level should be managed in each country, presenting potential good practices.

- Allow participants to meet and network in view of creating links between European countries and foster international cooperation and common approaches to the national transposition phase.

And the objectives for the workshop on Day 2 are:

- To reinforce Equality Bodies' capacity to engage with national stakeholders and make the case for supporting the Standards directives
- To ensure Equality Bodies' sound understanding of Standards and their implications for their respective National Equality Body.
- Support exchanging good practices on what they need to put in place at their national level to follow and influence the national legislative transposition process.

The conference will gather Heads of Policy participants from Equality Bodies, Civil Society Organisations, government representatives, representatives from the European Commission, and other European, international and German institutions. The advocacy workshop on Day 2 will gather senior policy representatives from Equinet Members.

The Federal Anti-Discrimination Agency (FADA)

The Federal Anti-Discrimination Agency is an independent federal agency promoting equal treatment at work and in everyday life. The agency, which was established in 2006 on the basis of the General Act on Equal Treatment (AGG) at the Federal Ministry for Family Affairs, Senior Citizens, Women and Youth, has 35 employees. The Act protects people from discrimination on racist grounds or on grounds of ethnic origin, religion or ideology, sexual orientation, gender, age or a disability in the areas of employment and work as well as in daily affairs such as shopping, banking transactions, restaurant visits or when looking for a flat. One of our main tasks is to offer counselling for people who have experienced or observed discrimination. We provide initial legal advice to people who have been discriminated against.

Equinet, European Network of Equality Bodies

Equinet is a membership organisation bringing together 48 Equality Bodies from across Europe. Equinet promotes equality in Europe by supporting and enabling the work of national equality bodies. It supports equality bodies to be independent and effective as valuable catalysts for more equal societies.

Equality bodies are champions for the core EU value of equality and defenders of the right to non-discrimination. They are public organisations assisting victims of discrimination, monitoring and reporting on discrimination issues, and contributing to an awareness of rights and a societal valuing of equality. They are legally required to do so in relation to one, some, or all of the grounds of discrimination covered by European Union (EU) law – gender, race and ethnicity, age, sexual orientation, religion or belief, and disability. By engaging closely with policy makers and partners at EU and international level, Equinet promotes the work of equality bodies through relevant publications, as well as participation at conferences and other meetings.
